

The Mona Lisa

Nature was important to The nature in the background of the monalisa was important because it represented humanism. It also showed a great interest in nature because of the green trees and plants, and made it look 3D.

How the last supper is similar to the Mona Lisa, they are both 3D and were both created by Leonardo da Vinci. And they both use similar painting techniques.

The smile of the monalisa showed her complex of emotion.
It also represented humanism because of the details of her enigmatic face. Her smile also caught the mysterious on how she can be.

The way the monalisa had her hands showed the details, and shadings in the art. Also had Leonardo da Vinci painted her showed his techniques in her hands. These techniques were new and popular during the Renaissance time.

It's a picture of the Mona Lisa, and it was created by Leonardo da Vinci. The painting represents the Renaissance because during the Renaissance time, painters, artists, created life like portraits that was 3D. Also showed the complex of emotions of the Mona Lisa.
And the background, emotion, techniques all represented humanism.
This portrait of the Mona Lisa is a primary source of the Renaissance because it uses Renaissance painting techniques.
